An Evening Echo.

To be bright and cheerful often requires an effort. There is a certain art in keeping ourselves happy. In this respect, as in others, we require to watch over and manage ourselves almost as if we were somebody else.—AVERBURY.

Startling reports come from Mexico, where the Carranza regime seems to be on its last legs. When the bewhiskered one departs the administration at Washington will have to choose a new favorite from among the blundering bandits whom it has dined with, one after another. Villa evidently has no chance for restoration to Wilson's bosom, but there are others on whom the favoring glance may fall.

Hard Job.

Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador at Constantinople, and now rendering first aid to the Wilson campaign for re-election, says it will not require much money to carry on the canvass.

Mr. Morgenthau wishes thus to impress people with the idea that Wilson's reelection is an easy matter. Nothing could be more distant from the facts. The presence of Mr. Morgenthau alone, with the ravishing of the diplomatic service which it implies, is proof that Wilson's reelection is a hard job, even impossible, and in trying to accomplish it no sacrifice will be counted too great. Mr. Morgenthau has already given up his embassy, and he and others will have to give up in another and even a more generous sense before the campaign is half-way over.

Has Opposition.

No real candidate has appeared to contest with Wilson for the Democratic nomination, but there have been tests, nevertheless, which show that he is not without opposition in his own party. In Nebraska an obscure liveryman secured about one-fourth of the votes cast in the Democratic primary, while in Ohio a candidate for delegate who was known to be an outspoken critic of Wilson got almost a third of the total vote.

It Depends.

O. P. Austin, formerly chief of the United States Bureau of Statistics, under the Republican regime, speaking before the Madison Avenue Men's League, New York City, on the opportunities for young men in South America, said:

"This, in my opinion, depends much, very much, on the young man himself, upon his present qualifications, and his willingness to acquire the other qualifications necessary to success in that field."

Interesting to Note.

President Wilson has made a personal appeal for the aid of business men in taking an industrial inventory to be used in the organization of the industrial resources for the public service in national defense. This recalls his address at the Jefferson Day banquet in 1912, in which he said:

"Now, suppose we put the shoe on the other foot and invite the gentlemen who want business let alone to let politics alone. I for my part agree to withdraw from troubling business if business will withdraw from troubling politics."

Fitless Publicity.

President Wilson having manifested an interest in the accuracy of press reports concerning the Mexican situation, it is suggested that the government begin a good work by taking the correspondents into its confidence instead of arresting them and otherwise endeavoring to make criminals out of them.

None of them needs lessons in patriotism; all of them, we are sure, are perfectly willing to observe the wishes of the war department with respect to military secrets. Nevertheless, during the past two weeks, they have been subjected to a censorship apparently as despotic as any in tyrant-ridden Europe.

There, at least, the governments design to issue a daily communiqué in the progress of events, while here even so small a scrap of comfort is denied the public—whose representatives these correspondents are.

Villa vs. Wilson.

Colonel George Harvey, who is more responsible than any other man for the presence of Woodrow Wilson in the White House, says that the issue of the coming campaign will be preparedness. An equally good prediction, says Collier's, is that another issue, even more capable of stirring up the indignation of the American people, will be the record of the administration's dealings with Villa. Villa is going to be a pretty unpopular person before next election day arrives, and the best thing any Republican campaign orator can do will be to dig up the story of the encouragement given to Villa by the administration, and the nice things said about him by Democratic leaders and organs. At one time, when President Wilson was most eager to destroy Huerta and alarmingly unsuccessful in his efforts, he turned to Villa as his hope. He permitted Villa to receive American arms and ammunition to use against Huerta, and it is these same rifles which are now being turned against American soldiers.

Wilson spoke of Villa as a genius who was going to supply Mexico with the long-needed leader, and save the administration from its very difficult predicament. Villa was duly grateful, and when our soldiers landed at Vera Cruz it was Villa who approved, while Carranza, the present favorite of the administration, threatened and blustered.

The Health Exhibit.

"Health Safety" is the keynote of the exhibit of the United States Public Health Service. Persons deaf of typhoid fever, malaria, or other preventable diseases are in the same class as those killed through the use of faulty bumpers, inadequate crossing signals, or the careless handling of explosives. Cause and effect are acting in either instance and the hazard to life is similar. But where one person dies from accidental causes, ten perish from preventable disease. All of which goes to prove that safety for health is even more essential than any other variety. Particularly is this true in rural communities where proper health protection is seldom afforded.

The major portion of the exhibit of the health service relates to typhoid fever, a disease which annually kills over 14,000 persons in the United States. For over ten years the service has conducted a vigorous campaign against this disease of filth, the chief cause of which is the improper disposal of human excrement. Various types of sanitary toilets and sewage disposal tanks are displayed. The role of the house fly in the spread of this infection is important, hence the models of this disease bearing insect in different stages of development. Of interest to farmers and dairymen are the large models of an insanitary and a sanitary dairy. The lesson these models teach is an important one. Oftentimes contaminated water is responsible for the spread of typhoid. Just how this contaminated water is brought about is illustrated in a striking model of interest to every resident of a rural community. The improper and proper methods of well construction are also demonstrated.

Malaria, another preventable disease, is transmitted by the mosquito. Enlarged models of the eggs, larvae and adult forms of this insect are exhibited. The various methods of mosquito destruction are also depicted most graphically.

Probably the most convincing exhibit is that relating to smallpox. Two children, one in the eruptive stage of smallpox, the other presenting every appearance of health, are sitting side by side. The secret of the second child's immunity rests in the vaccination mark. The models were made from photographs of actual cases in the wards of a smallpox hospital. A second model of this character depicts the dangers arising from the use of the common roller towel.

Those who are careless in the disposal of garbage will profit from seeing a cross section of a house and a nearby garbage barrel. The actual condition within the walls of the house are brought to light and one realizes what rodent infestation means. As an accompaniment of this model others are shown depicting the methods of construction of rat-proof houses and stables.

A feature of the health exhibit of far reaching value is the distribution of pamphlets on health topics, "The Care of the Baby," "The Transmission of Disease by Flies," "What the Farmer Can Do to Prevent Malaria" are some of the titles of the literature distributed.

LITTLE MISS PRONUNCIATE.

Of seed a peck the seeds man tossed us.
 Then sacks of bone, alas!
 Off we wonder just what it cost us,
 That little blade of grass.

"Professor," said Little Rollo, "will you please tell me the correct way to pronounce the name of the Mexican bandit whose name appears so frequently in the public prints?"

"A very good question, Rollo," answered the professor. "However, as that is a point about which I myself am still a trifle hazy, we will seek our answer on the public highways, and perhaps by-ways. For in matters of pronunciation, Rollo, the lexicographers are always guided by the usage of the multitude."

And they fared forth, and to the first man they met the professor put the question: "How, sir, if you

What Does Your Food Cost?

You could easily spend two dollars for a meal and not get as much real, body-building nutriment as you get in two Shredded Wheat Biscuits, the food that contains all the muscle-making material in the whole wheat grain prepared in a digestible form. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk or cream will make a complete, perfect meal, at a cost of not over five cents. A food for youngsters and grown-ups. Eat it for breakfast with milk or cream; eat it for luncheon with fresh berries or other fruits. Made at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

please, do you pronounce the name of the infamous Mexican bandit, spelled V-I-L-L-A?"

"The correct pronunciation is Veetcha," replied the wayfarer readily. "The gills are silent, as in fish."

But the next man, being asked, replied, "Oh, you mean Wuilla—it's pronounced with Roosevelt consonants."

And still the next man speaking thus: "You pronounce it Rosengarten, because of the Spanish 's' and 'y's. Not at all. You are quite welcome."

And the professor and little Rollo returned to the class room musingly.

LIGHT OCCUPATION.

LIFE'S LITTLE LIES.

"Not guilty."

Physician's Prescription For Rheumatism

Business and professional men of large means who have taken expensive baths at famous resorts and have spent money lavishly to rid themselves of the tormenting agony of rheumatism have turned to Rheuma and got well.

When Rheuma goes in, poisonous secretions go out. No opiates or narcotics are used. Rheuma drives out the cause of rheumatism and speedily brings comfort and health, and most druggists will admit it.

"Two bottles of Rheuma will cost you a dollar of Wells & Haymaker Company or any druggist, and if this purchase does not bring you the freedom from pain and misery you expect, your money is waiting for you."

NOTICE TO WATER CONSUMERS.

All water consumers desiring to use a lawn or street sprinkler in connection with the domestic supply must first obtain a permit from the office, and any person or persons using city water without first obtaining such permit shall be liable to a fine of two dollars per day for every day said water is so used.

In sprinkling streets each water taker must confine himself to the number of feet mentioned in his permit. Nozzles larger than one-fourth inch will not be permitted, except upon additional charge, and sprinkling without a nozzle is forbidden.

Sprinkling streets and lawns is restricted to five and ten a. m., and one hour between five and eight p. m. If a street sprinkler or hose is found out of order, leaking or used for any other purpose than that for which it is intended, the supply will be discontinued without previous notice.

In deference to the general interest the use of a hose is strictly prohibited during the continuance of a fire, or while the fire pressure is maintained, except to protect property in danger of burning.

Patrons who are paying for a sprinkling privilege will not be required to renew their permit. There is no fractional part of a sprinkling season which runs from June 1st, to September 1st, inclusive.
